

Abstract

A device has a housing and at least one electrical component in the housing, the housing being filled at least partially by a passivating agent. The electrical component is covered at 5 least partially by the passivating agent. An additional material layer is applied on top of the passivating agent, which arrangement allows the device to be resistive to environmental damages.